Working with Imagery and Metaphor to unlock inner resourcefulness

Simple images and key words carry vast amounts of encoded information that can be worked up to provide a significant therapeutic encounter.

Interactive Drawing Therapy (IDT) is a unique modality, backed by contemporary neuro-science, that provides new and powerful tools to transform the traditional talking processes. It provides an interactive page-focused way of seeing the big picture, and activates an inherently resourceful and solution-oriented part of the client's psyche.

IDT uses jointly-constructed visual imagery to review the client's situation, reframe their conflict, generate insight, access cognitive and emotional resourcefulness, and start a remarkable process of constructive decision-making. With over 4,000 professional course enrolments, IDT demonstrably offers you a theory and practice that works, extending your range of skills, and increasing your professional effectiveness and satisfaction.

Recent Testimonials:

- The very best of training courses I have ever attended. We intend to travel to NZ for next year's conference.
- I thoroughly enjoyed the 4-day training... a very professional, well-structured experience.
- I've just returned from a fabulous experience of IDT. I learned a lot and will find it very useful in my practice.
- The most 'information packed' course I've attended. I am very happy someone emailed it to my manager.
- Excellent. Skills that can be put into practice immediately. Fabulous / Inspiring. Simply brilliant, Wow factor, Clear.
- Excellent! Content very useful, teacher presentation excellent, pace good, demonstrations and practice all really good. Handouts great.
- Accessible and mind-blowing. Impressive. Very powerful.

Interactive Drawing Therapy is used in one-to-one and group work by: counsellors, youth workers, mental health teams, corrections officers, alcohol and drug services, specialist education services, Aboriginal and Maori service providers, sexual abuse and refuge centres, immigrant services, stopping violence agencies, chaplains, psychotherapists, and social work agencies. IDT has been presented at national and international conferences, university researched, and published in professional journals.

WORKING WITH PAGES:

- The page concretizes the client's thoughts and feelings - allowing the client to separate them from self.
- As more material is layered onto the page, the client's mentalising shifts from giving out information and opinion, to taking in implication and insight.
- Seeing the bigger picture provokes a change in perception, enabling the client to intuitively find a wiser next step toward a more authentic future.

WORKING WITH IMAGES:

- By alternating left- and right-brain functions, the page becomes a transitional space mediating between objective event and subjective experience.
- Working with images activates the constructive aspects of the unconscious.
- Visual metaphors provide a language that bypasses the constraints of logic. Anything is possible and permissible on a page.
